

From: wbhalert
To: wbhalert
Date: 09 December 2008 10:10 am
Subject: Dioxins in Irish Pork

The FSA are advising that pork and pork products from the Irish republic and Northern Ireland should not be eaten. Businesses selling pork or products mainly made from pork e.g. sausages, ham, can sell their products if they can prove they are not affected.

To read the Food Standards Agency's statement go to:

<http://www.food.gov.uk/news/newsarchive/2008/dec/porkadvice>